UTCESTER [Uttoxeter] is a house of the Minors; very ancient gentlemen they are; for I find testes to a deed in Henry the Third's time [1216-72], or I think, rather, in King John's time [1199-1216] ... Roger de Minores, Will de. Minores, Reginald de Minores .. I have also seen a deed of Edward the First's time [1272-1307, whereunto were testes, John de Minores ... and I have also read that sir John Minores was a knight 6 Edw. III. [1332-3]

Thomas Minors of Lichfield, Staffs mercer 1609-1677
Minors, born on 26 Oct 1609, was a son of Robert Minors of Uttoxeter gentleman c1586-.... and Gertrude Hurt daughter of Edmund Hurt of Marchington c1535-?1610. He was Sheriff of Lichfield 1642-3, Junior Bailiff of Lichfield 1648-9 and a J.P. for Staffordshire 1653-60. On 28 Aug 1654 he was appointed an Assistant Commissioner for the ejection of scandalous ministers in Staffordshire. He was M.P. for Lichfield 1654-5 1656-8 1659 and 27 Jun 1660 and Senior Bailiff of Lichfield 1657-8. On 30 Mar 1663 he certified the heraldic visitation. About 1668 he was assessed on 9 hearths at Sadlers Street (incl. Market Street), Lichfield St Mary. In 1670 he founded Minors's English School at the corner of Bore Street and St John Street in Lichfield. His house at Lichfield was licensed for presbyterian worship in Jun 1672. Minors died, aged 68, in Sep 1677 and was buried on 30 Sep at Lichfield St Mary. His will written on 3 Jul 1677 was proved under PCC on 12 Oct 1667. Minors married first to Sarah Burnes (d 1667) dau of John Burnes of Aldershaw in Lichfield mercer c1585-.... by whom he had 1 son. He married second to Dorothy Jesson (sister of William Jesson of Lichfield c1610-p1686) (no known children). In his will Minors mentions five Staffordshire ministers Thomas Bakewell, John Butler, Richard Chantry, William Grace and Richard Swinfen (see below).

Thomas Minors (d. 1677), a mercer who was M.P. for Lichfield 1654–60 and a prominent member of the corporation at that time, was also a leading Presbyterian. Among his proteges were John Butler, minister at St. Chad's in 1651 and minister at St. Mary's by 1656, and Thomas Miles*, Butler's successor at St. Chad's. Both Butler and Miles were ejected in 1662, and Miles evidently formed a Presbyterian congregation, holding services in a Curborough farmhouse; some 40 people presented for non-attendance at St. Chad's in 1665 were possibly members of that meeting. Miles was licensed as a Presbyterian teacher in 1672, but nothing further is known of him. The Presbyterians remained powerful in the city after the Restoration. Bishop Hacket complained that 'the Presbyterians of the city do what they list, come not to the holy communion, baptize in hugger-mugger, are presented for their faults but no order taken with them', and Dean Wood allotted prominent seats in the cathedral to Thomas Minors and his brother-in-law* William Jesson*. Presbyterian influence extended in 1667 to the election as M.P. of Richard Dyott, who Hacket* *believed was completely under their control. In July 1669 Minors and Jesson were summoned before the Privy Council for holding a conventicle in Minors's house. They moved the meeting to a farmhouse at Elmhurst, where a conventicle later the same month lasted most of the day. According to Hacket it was attended by some 80 people, of whom the ringleader was a Lichfield carrier named James Rixam (or Rixom), a man 'no way fit for that trust, being a transcendent schismatic'. Minors and Jesson subsequently appeared before the Council but were discharged. Five houses in Lichfield were licensed for Presbyterian worship in 1672; they included Minors's house and that of John Barker, another mercer who was later one of the trustees of the English school in Bore Street established under Minors's will.
